Base on our findings, we created wireframes in Invision. While we were creating wireframes, the flow that guides thee user through the process, was our priority. We replaced help messages with simple functional steps that help figure out how the extension should work. And new features were integrated to help users save their time.

Low-Fidelity Wireframes

Focusing on the user journey, these wireframes replace wordy instructions with a functional, task-based flow. By stripping away visual distractions, we've optimized the extension's interface to highlight time-saving features and clear navigational steps.
